RESOLUTIONS

What is the chief problem fac-

the most revolutionary half struggle for men's minds and souls-for freedom as we know it in America, as opposed to slavery under various forms of dictatorship.

This is a year of decision for all Americans. We must resolve today to take an active stand for democratic freedom, not just a passive restatement that we are "good Americans." A positive determination to make our free way of life work to the fullest possible extent for the benefit of all of us. A resolve to prevent that indifference to the duties of good citizenship which has allowed dictatorships and slave states to spring up in many other lands. A resolve to be "active citizens" every day of the year by voting intelligently and honestly, by assuming our obligations to work for a better community, by studying issues carefully, by avoiding group prejudices, by constantly practicing good citizenship.

The American Heritage Foundation, which conducted the Freedom Train tour in 1947 and 1948, which included a two-day stop in Gettysburg, November 19 and 20, 1948, and which is now directing a national program to raise the level of active citizenship through re-emphasizing the significance of our major national holidays, has proposed that we make 1950 a "Year of Consecration" to our American Heritage. It has suggested that each community hold a period of special events emphasizing our duties as good citizens, combined with a year-long educational program for more active

This all becomes a matter of individual responsibility. Communities will make varying plans to support the program. But each one of us in his own heart must earnestly resolve on this New Year's Day to be a better and more active citizen to make this personally a "Year of Consecration" to our heritage of freedom. We will thus do our part to make sure that the next half century will see the growth of freedom throughout the good to be pruned. The artificial dividing line between the lawn and the shrubbery border disappears with an improvement in the appearance of the border.

The improvement is especially evident when the shrubs have shed their leaves, with a dense mat of green reaching right to the wall of the building where a foundation planting is involved.

Living mulches hold surprisingly large quantities of rain water which they give up slowly, and the force of each raindrop is broken before it reaches the soil. Evaporation of soil moisture is reduced to a minimum No direct sunlight can reach the soil and that means a cooler soil during the hot summer.

The opposite holds true for winter Frost is barred from penetrating as deeply as in bare soil, but once it has entered it takes relatively long balmy periods to thaw it out again. That gives all plants concerned an undisturbed winter rest.

Should the shrubs need feeding, liquid applications offer an excellent solution but dry commercial fertilizer Let's check the records of the old also can be used. Make sure the From start to now, and try to see leaves of the ground cover are dry when it is applied and follow with a forceful stream of water from the hose to wash the particles off the

The large quantity of dry leaves which will collect and settle unobtrusively between the plants is an ply of organic matter. If more seems desirable, granulated peat-moss or sedge peat applied lightly over the plants will soon sift toward the base.

Two hardy, low-growing plants are ideal ground-cover plants among shrubs. They are ivy and trailing myrtle (Vinca minor). Japanese spurge (Pachysandra terminals) may be added as a third but the upright stems call for care when the gardener has to enter the bed for pruning the shrubs. A combination of all three is desirable. In that case the ivy is likely to dominate the north side while the trailing myrtle, also called periwinkle, gets the upper hand toward the sunny one, with the Japanese spurge showing no

New, Easy Way to Farm

The new Eagle Hitch on the 1950 Case "VAC" tractor takes hold of the new latchon implements and picks them up-fast and easy. Without getting off the seat you just latch on, slip in a pin, and go! You get to the field quicker, finish sooner. Work is done better because the Eagle Hitch keeps implements working at a steady depth in spite of hard spots and uneven ground. Come in and see it! Try the new low-pressure hydraulic implement control. You'll like the way it works with both latch-on and front-mounted implements. This isn't push-button farming but it's the nearest thing to it. And you'll be amazed at the eager power wrapped up in this low-cost 2-plow tractor.
